

Cler Baheri was born and raised in Tabriz, Iran. After graduating high school, she was denied entrance to university because she was a Bahá'í. She left Iran soon thereafter, and was resettled as a refugee in Canada before moving to the United States. She received her Doctor of Chiropractic from Western States Chiropractic College in Oregon, and has been in private practice since 2000. She lives in Fredericksburg, Virginia with her husband and two dogs.
